ABSTRACT:

In a magnetic resonance imaging method flow quantities and diffusion quantities are measured in the presence of temporary magnetic gradient fields (gradient pulses). Signal amplitudes of the magnetic resonance signals and/or flow and diffusion quantities calculated from the magnetic resonance signals are corrected for non-linearities in the magnetic gradient fields.